And now, my dear children, tis time, papa said, That we all had some supper, and went oft to bed; In love and in peace may all henceforth agree, And long life to the nest in the dear old fir-tree. HEIGMO, a convention right here in the farm-yard! Ked Rooster is the chief speaker and begins with a shrill Listen, all of you-ool Of all the fowl, he says, I and my family are most useful to the world. (Hisses from the ducks and geese). Do we not furnish man with eggs for his breakfast, meat for his dinner and soft feather pillows for his weary head (Applause). Is it not a shame, then, that in return for all this, our owners are often unwilling to give us the few kernels of grain, the fresh water and the warm, dry house we need to make us comfortable (Indignation and applause). We are wise, too, you might know that, by observing our little ones. (Here every hen holds her head very high and listens attentively). Everybody knows how the sparrow brings the food in its beak to its naked little ones, who can only crouch together in the nest and open their mouths for it. But look at our fresh-hatched chicks, running about like...
